

AWARD School is one of the most prestigious and competitive creative advertising training programs in Australia and the wider Asia-Pacific region.

Out of more than 300 applicants in 2022, I was one of 11 selected through a brief-based creative application.

AWARD teaches aspiring copywriters and art directors how to think creatively, develop original ideas, and communicate powerfully through lectures from top creatives and a series of challenging briefs.

Below are some highlights from my final book, the first one of which was selected and featured “on the wall” — recognised by the judges as a standout creative idea that demonstrated the strongest strategic and conceptual thinking across the cohort.

Dreamcatcher

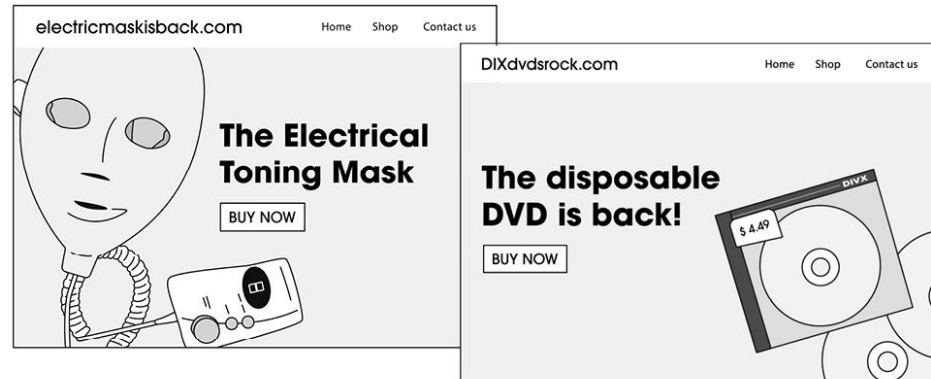

Insight: Dreams get left behind when no one believes in them.

Idea: Squarespace brings long-lost ideas back to life and gives them the attention they deserve.

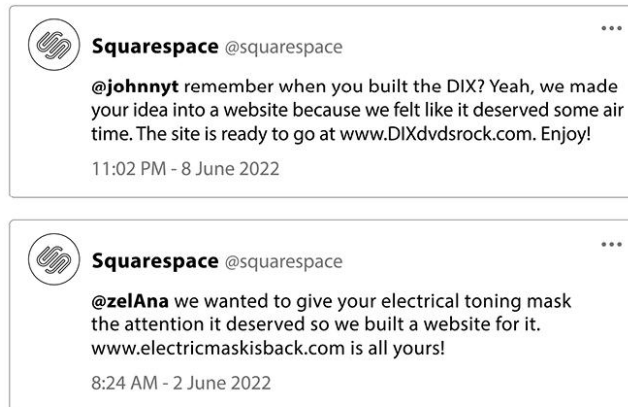

Step 1: Squarespace uses AI to troll through online patent databases and choose its favourite ideas that didn't make it.

Step 2: Squarespace builds a website for them.

Step 3: Squarespace shares the website with the inventor on social media.

Client | Squarespace

Deliverable | A digital idea that encourages people to build their website on Squarespace.

Proposition | Don't just dream it, build a website.

It's ~~Prada~~ HCF darling

Insight: We spend an estimated $12 billion a year on premium grooming products and designer accessories for our pets.

Idea: Encourage families already shelling out in the luxury aisle at the pet store to get something even more important for their pet, like insurance.

*QR code takes you to HCF policy page.

Client | HCF

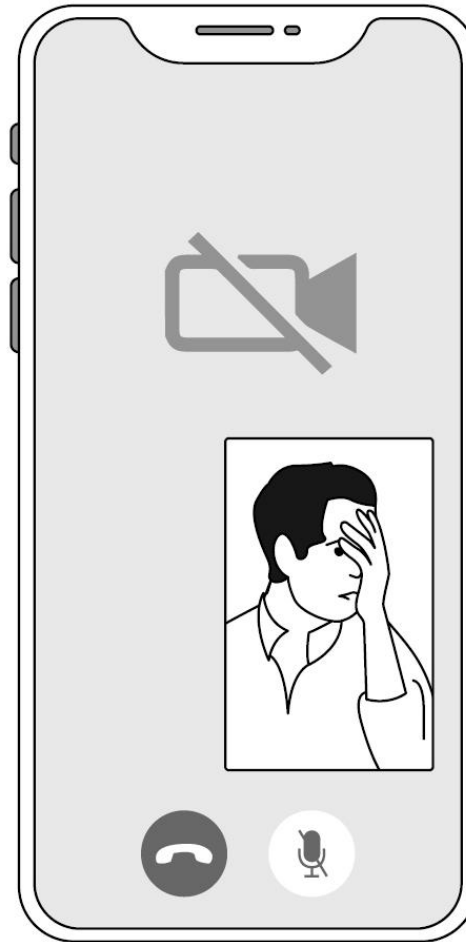

Deliverable | A direct idea across one/several touch points depending on your solution that gets people to take out HCF Insurance for their pet.

Proposition | Pets are part of the family too.

Hello, Boomer.

Problem: Video calls connect us with elderly family members wherever we are in the world. Unfortunately, catch ups are hijacked by under-our-breath-expletives as we explain impatiently to poor Gran how to fix her video/sound/any other technical issue derivative.

Idea: When activated during a video call, an app called Boomer lets you help older family members fix tech difficulties for them by gaining remote access to their phone.

“

Turn your video on Gran.

What?

Turn your video ON.

My what?

YOUR VIDEO GRAN.

It's on.

No it's not.

Yes it is.

No it's not.

Oh. How do I turn it on then?

Ok Gran, I'm booming in...
